

This article will be called 'How to design a nuclear power station' because it will be about a possible explanation for the experiment of Fleischmann and Pons. It will contain indications on how this experiment can be made controllable in order to obtain a reliable energy source.